Madison, Wis., Sept. 30.—(UP)—Bootleggers and moonshiners apparently are paying heavy tribute to the support of Wisconsin educational institutions. Prohibition Commissioner L. C. Gunderson announced yesterday.

Fines for breaches of the penal laws diverted to the school fund during the seven years preceding prohibition, 1913 to 1919, inclusive, averaged $104,345.54 annually, Gunderson stated. In the seven years following prohibition 1920 to 1926 inclusive, an annual average of $428,706.76 has accrued to the fund from the same source, he pointed out. If only the last five years 1922 to 1926, when prohibition enforcement has been vigorous are to be considered the yearly average in fines diverted into the school fund amounts to $541,545.34, Gunderson declared.

New York, Sept. 30.—George E. Williams, managing director of the claims bureau in the alien property office during 1921, early today was called as the first witness in the defense of Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government "of his best service and advice."

The witness was involved in the trial of Miller by the testimony of Richard Merton, German financier, who was granted the transfer of $7,000,000 in assets of the American Metal Company on the plea that the assets were owned by a Swiss corporation. Merton's payment of $441,000 to the late John T. King for his part in the transfer led to the trial of Miller together with former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty.

Merton had testified that in the summer of 1921 he conferred with Williams relative to the claim. Williams told him, the German said, that the claim should be filed on the basis of present Swiss ownership rather than as the payment of a debt contracted by a German banking house and metal corporation.

Williams was a contained witness. His testimony was principally to the effect that he advised Merton on his own account and without instructions from Miller.

Enforcement of Prohibition Law Has Cost the United States More Than $114,724,000 So Far

Washington, Sept. 30.—Enforcement of the prohibition law has cost the United States more than $114,724,000 thus far.

In addition to this money outlay, 335 persons have lost their lives in the civil war between federal forces and bootleggers.

These statistics were obtained by the United Press at the treasury from the government reports today.

Operation of the prohibition unit, including money to be spent up to the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1927, has amounted to $22,902,514. Coastguard activities for the prevention of rum smuggling have cost $52,151,560.

Millions of dollars have been spent by the justice department for prosecution of liquor cases, but no record of the amount is kept. Much of the money spent for federal courts could be charged to prohibition, officials said.

Prohibition agents have been killed in line of duty since the Volstead act was adopted. More than 150 persons have been killed by dry officers and 135 coastguard men lost their lives while on duty preventing rum smuggling. Most of the guardsmen were washed overboard while on patrol work.

Fines collected in federal courts for prohibition law violation during the last three years swelled the treasury coffers by more than $22,000,000.

Dry agents in seven years have confiscated property valued at nearly $80,000,000. Most of the liquor seized, however, was destroyed.

"If prohibition cost a billion dollars a year, it would still yield a profit of nine billion," Deets Pickett, secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Public Morals, said when the figures were called to his attention.

"Prohibition saves billions of dollars annually as a result of decreased liquor bills and increased efficiency. If prohibition were not in effect it is reasonable to suppose the annual liquor bill of this country would be nearly five billion dollars."

"The loss of 335 lives in the battle to enforce prohibition is compensated for by the decreased death rate which followed passage of the dry law," Pickett said.

Record Enrollment at

Minneapolis, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Senator William E. Borah, republican, Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, charged here today that France is using money rightfully due to the United States for carrying on a militaristic program.

"One might consider France's dilemma in a different light if it were not for the fact that money which should be paid to the United States is being utilized to continue a militaristic reign in Europe," Borah said. "The money France is expending for conducting the war in Syria would more than pay her full war debt to the United States."

Borah reaffirmed his position that no reduction in France's war debt should be allowed and pointed to the Italian war debt settlement as a "glaring example" of what should not be done in arranging war debt payments.

In an address prepared for delivery at the Left Erickson Day convocation of the University of Minnesota, Senator Borah said that the issue regarding prohibition is whether to uphold our laws, not the question of state's rights in determining what alcoholic content of liquor should be illegal.

"Prohibition should be enforced and the constitution maintained until the people in their wisdom see fit to rewrite it," Borah said.

"Stay and win" was his mother's last message to Rogers.

It was tentatively decided his wife should go immediately. The decision as to himself was delayed.

As Mrs. Hornsby was about to board a train, a telegram arrived.

"Stay with Rogers. He needs you. All is done here," it was signed "the folks."

BELIEVED PRESIDENT CAREFUL-

JUDICING CHANCES

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Sept. 30.—Washington political leaders, generally, are convinced despite official silence from the White House, that President Coolidge has set his eye on 1928.

Senators, congressmen and party leaders are practically unanimous in the private opinion that Mr. Coolidge is carefully refraining from prejudicing his chances for another term. These men have sometimes misinterpreted the actions of the executive, and they may be wrong again, but their firm conviction now is that Mr. Coolidge seeks to be republican presidential candidate in 1928.

This impression they have gleaned not alone from Mr. Coolidge's activities and from their talks with him but also from the conversation and activities of his closest friends.

These leaders say Mr. Coolidge will not take full personal responsibility for the outcome of the November elections.

First, Mr. Coolidge gave republican leaders to understand, they say, that he would take no part in the campaign. Within the last few days statements have been issued by republican campaign managers indicating that while they desire to have voters stand by the administration in the coming election, they do not desire to make Mr. Coolidge bear the responsibility for the outcome.

The latest word on the subject which has set Washington buzzing comes from Chairman Butler of the republican national committee, and close friend of the president, who expressed his views after two visits at the White House.

"I do not know what part the president will take in the campaign," he said. "I believe the issue is support of the administration. I like to think about a continuance of prosperity and I think everyone else does."

The statement was in answer to a question: "Is the issue Mr. Coolidge?"

As for the president, his spokesman has ignored numerous questions concerning another term asked him by newspapermen in press conferences.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 30.—Aimee Semple McPherson's preliminary hearing on charges of conspiracy to defeat justice will be resumed today with the state expected to put Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Seilaff on the witness stand.

Mrs. Seilaff has made an affidavit that she was hired and coached by the evangelist to produce a "Miss X," the mysterious companion of Kenneth G. Ormiston, radio operator, at the Carmel by the Sea cottage.

Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Seilaff, Ormiston, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, the evangelist's mother and "Joe Doe" Martin, an attorney, are charged with criminal conspiracy in connection with the kidnapping story, Mrs. McPherson told the grand jury, upon her return after disappearing from the beach at Venice.

The hearing was halted yesterday by the collapse of Mrs. Kennedy. Her recovery, however, assured resumption of the hearing today.

Mrs. Kennedy, business manager of her daughter's Angelus Temple, burst into tears and sobbed so hysterically that she and Mrs. McPherson had to be taken from the court room.

Mrs. Kennedy's outburst was the first of its kind. She began weeping while District Attorney Asa Keyes was reading into the record a transcript of Mrs. McPherson's kidnapping story as she told it to the grand jury which investigated her strange disappearance.

Street cars must not be used except in an emergency. If busses are not available, however, eight cents a mile will be paid for automobile hire.

RESCUE WORKERS REACH THEM
AFTER FIVE DAYS OF
TUNNELING

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 30.—(UP)—From the still darkness of a living tomb underground, 43 miners have been led back to light and life by the courage, faith and resourcefulness of their leader.

While he recovers at a hospital where he was taken after collapsing, Thomas Trewartha, shift boss, a son of Cornwall, who is a powerful man despite his 62 years, has the blessings of the women of this mining town today because he brought them "their men" after hope had all but gone.

The 42 men whose confidence he sustained during the 121 hours of alternating despair and hope in a cave-in 780 feet from the surface, are in the same hospital, gradually being nursed back to strength.

They were reached by rescue workers who after five days of tunneling, reached a clear sector of the shaft that was choked at either end by the debris of a cave-in.

Through this shaft on the 20th level, communication was had with the imprisoned miners on the eighth level above, their physical condition learned and the preparations for removing them down to the bottom of the mine and up another entry, were completed.

Just before the noon whistle sounded Friday, the crashing of a slide drowned all other noises in the mine. "G" shaft, weakened by the heavy rains, had collapsed and filled with debris.

Forty of the men, including Trewartha, were on the eighth level. Two mine inspectors were on the 18th level and one on the 13th.

The story is pieced together from what the weakened men told. Their first thought was not of fear, but instinctively they turned to Trewartha. The Cornishman had won the praise of his superiors for cool headed action before and he maintained his leadership not only by appointment but by his personal hold on the men.

Not appreciating the extent of the slide the men heard the sounds of blasting above them as the rescue work started and were contented with the thought that they would be out of the trap by night.

But night came, that they knew by their watches, and the long hours passed. The blasting still sounded, but faintly and help did not come.

Trewartha's dominance soothed panicky feelings.

The men, under his direction, sought egress. They knew that the shaft was blocked from the top at least as far down as the eighth level and so started working their way down.

Their search led them to an old drift, which enabled them to descend to the 20th level, less than 100 feet from the 21st but having no connection. The 21st level opened into the "H" shaft, which was not affected by the cave-in.

The three mine inspectors had worked their way to the 40 and all were together. They went back to the eighth level and remained, awaiting rescue.

Their feelings during the many hours under ground can easily be imagined, for none was in a condition to do much talking. But every one had something to say for "good old Tom" Trewartha, who apparently was their sole staff.

They had but enough food for one meal. But over a fire built on the floor of the eighth level, they brewed birch bark tea, which could not still their hunger, but quieted it. The bark they stripped from the timbers that strengthened the mine.

Their carbide lamps burned out before the third day, but from the mine cars they salvaged paraffin lamps which cast a dimmer but more penetrating light.

Leonard Uren, a former Salvation Army worker, led the men in singing and praying. He had been in amateur vaudeville and entertained the men with his humor. They made

MONEY SPENT IN SYRIAN WAR

DEBT DEMAND

Minneapolis, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Senator William E. Borah, republican, Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, charged here today that France is using money rightfully due to the United States for carrying on a militaristic program.

"One might consider France's dilemma in a different light if it were not for the fact that money which should be paid to the United States is being utilized to continue a militaristic reign in Europe," Borah said. "The money France is expending for conducting the war in Syria would more than pay her full war debt to the United States."

Borah reaffirmed his position that no reduction in France's war debt should be allowed and pointed to the Italian war debt settlement as a "glaring example" of what should not be done in arranging war debt payments.

In an address prepared for delivery at the Lelf Erickson Day convocation of the University of Minnesota, Senator Borah said that the issue regarding prohibition is whether to uphold our laws, not the question of state's rights in determining what alcoholic content of liquor should be illegal.

"Prohibition should be enforced and the constitution maintained until the people in their wisdom see fit to rewrite it," Borah said.

New York, Sept. 30.—(UP)—The dying wish of Rogers Hornsby's mother will be carried out.

The young leader of the St. Louis Cardinals will lead his team into the world series here Saturday afternoon while his mother's funeral is delayed, until his team can spare him to go to Austin, Tex., to attend the services.

"Stay and win" was his mother's last message to Rogers.

It was tentatively decided his wife should go immediately. The decision as to himself was delayed.

As Mrs. Hornsby was about to board a train, a telegram arrived. "Stay with Rogers. He needs you. All is done here," it was signed "the folks."

He wired to ascertain if the funeral would be delayed until he returns. It was night when a reply to his query was received. He came out of the room.

"It's going to be hard," he said, "but she wanted me to stay and I've

Washington, Sept. 30.—Washington political leaders, generally, are convinced despite official silence from the White House, that President Coolidge has set his eye on 1928.

Senators, congressmen and party leaders are practically unanimous in the private opinion that Mr. Coolidge is carefully refraining from prejudicing his chances for another term. These men have sometimes misinterpreted the actions of the executive, and they may be wrong again, but their firm conviction now is that Mr. Coolidge seeks to be republican presidential candidate in 1928.

This impression they have gleaned not alone from Mr. Coolidge's activities and from their talks with him but also from the conversation and activities of his closest friends. These leaders say Mr. Coolidge will not take full personal responsibility for the outcome of the November elections.

First, Mr. Coolidge gave republican leaders to understand, they say, that he would take no part in the campaign. Within the last few days statements have been issued by republican campaign managers indicating that while they desire to have voters stand by the administration in the coming election, they do not desire to make Mr. Coolidge bear the responsibility for the outcome.

The latest word on the subject which has set Washington buzzing comes from Chairman Butler of the republican national committee, and close friend of the president, who expressed his views after two visits at the White House.

"I do not know what part the president will take in the campaign," he said. "I believe the issue is support of the administration. I like to think about a continuance of prosperity and I think everyone else does."

The statement was in answer to a question: "Is the issue Mr. Coolidge?"

As for the president, his spokesman has ignored numerous questions concerning another term asked him by newspapermen in press conferences.

Eau Claire, Wis., Sept. 30.—(UP)—The "Houdini" tactics of Howard Hilton, wanted at Duluth, Minn., on a charge of forgery failed him in one emergency.

Hilton, who picked the lock of one link of a handcuff and slipped out of it, leaving the other end around the wrist of a deputy sheriff, was arrested here Wednesday and is being held for Duluth police.

The escape was effected on a Great Northern train while the deputy sheriff was asleep in a berth near Dickinson, N. D.

St. Paul, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Twin Cities police were notified today of the escape of two bandits from the Estherville, Ia., prison late Wednesday.

The bandits were Frank Smith and Charles W. Herbster, pals of Thomas Barone, Mathew McNeil and another bandit, who were captured several weeks ago in attempting to hold up a Superior, Wis., bank. All five had long police records.

Reports from Mankato said the two escaped prisoners went through there Wednesday night and were believed heading toward the Twin Cities.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 30.—Aimee Semple McPherson's preliminary hearing on charges of conspiracy to defeat justice will be resumed today with the state expected to put Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Sellauff on the witness stand.

Mrs. Sellauff has made an affidavit that she was hired and coached by the evangelist to produce a "Miss X," the mysterious companion of Kenneth G. Ormiston, radio operator, at the Carmel by the Sea cottage.

Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Sellauff, Ormiston, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, the evangelist's mother and "Joe Doe" Martin, an attorney, are charged with criminal conspiracy in connection with the kidnapping story. Mrs. McPherson told the grand jury, upon her return after disappearing from the beach at Venice.

The hearing was halted yesterday by the collapse of Mrs. Kennedy. Her recovery, however, assured resumption of the hearing today.

Mrs. Kennedy, business manager of her daughter's Angelus Temple, burst into tears and sobbed so hysterically that she and Mrs. McPherson had to be taken from the court room.

Mrs. Kennedy's outburst was the first of its kind. She began weeping while District Attorney Asa Keyes was reading into the record a transcript of Mrs. McPherson's kidnapping story as she told it to the grand jury which investigated her strange disappearance.

BANDITS HOLD UP BANK

Portland, Ind., Sept. 30.—(UP)—Four bandits today held up the First National Bank of Portland and escaped with loot estimated by bank officials at $20,000.

Driving up to the bank in an automobile, three of the bandits entered while the fourth remained in the car with the motor running. The three bandits entered the bank, one of them with a drawn revolver. They forced J. B. Ashgram, cashier, and other bank employees and several customers to the rear of the building.

Street cars must not be used except in an emergency. If busses are not available, however, eight cents a mile will be paid for automobile hire.

SHIFT BOSS, AGE 62, SON OF CORNWALL, HELD GROUP TOGETHER

AFTER FIVE DAYS OF
TUNNELING

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 30.—(UP)—From the still darkness of a living tomb underground, 43 miners have been led back to light and life by the courage, faith and resourcefulness of their leader.

While he recovers at a hospital where he was taken after collapsing, Thomas Trewartha, shift boss, a son of Cornwall, who is a powerful man despite his 62 years, has the blessings of the women of this mining town today because he brought them "their men" after hope had all but gone.

The 42 men whose confidence he sustained during the 121 hours of alternating despair and hope in a cave-in 780 feet from the surface, are in the same hospital, gradually being nursed back to strength.

They were reached by rescue workers who after five days of tunneling, reached a clear sector of the shaft that was choked at either end by the debris of a cave-in.

Through this shaft on the 20th level, communication was had with the imprisoned miners on the eighth level above, their physical condition learned and the preparations for removing them down to the bottom of the mine and up another entry, were completed.

Just before the noon whistle sounded Friday, the crashing of a slide drowned all other noises in the mine. "G" shaft, weakened by the heavy rains, had collapsed and filled with debris.

Forty of the men, including Trewartha, were on the eighth level. Two mine inspectors were on the 13th level and one on the 13th.

The story is pieced together from what the weakened men told. Their first thought was not of fear, but instinctively they turned to Trewartha. The Cornishman had won the praise of his superiors for cool headed action before and he maintained his leadership not only by appointment but by his personal hold on the men.

Not appreciating the extent of the slide the men heard the sounds of blasting above them as the rescue work started and were contented with the thought that they would be out of the trap by night.

But night came, that they knew by their watches, and the long hours passed. The blasting still sounded, but faintly and help did not come. Trewartha's dominance soothed panicky feelings.

The men, under his direction, sought egress. They knew that the shaft was blocked from the top at least as far down as the eighth level and so started working their way down.

Their search led them to an old drift, which enabled them to descend to the 20th level, less than 100 feet from the 21st but having no connection. The 21st level opened into the "H" shaft, which was not affected by the cave-in.

Their feelings during the many hours under ground can easily be imagined, for none was in a condition to do much talking. But every one had something to say for "good old Tom" Trewartha, who apparently was their sole staff.

They had but enough food for one meal. But over a fire built on the floor of the eighth level, they brewed birch bark tea, which could not still their hunger, but quieted it. The bark they stripped from the timbers that strengthened the mine.

Their carbide lamps burned out before the third day, but from the mine cars they salvaged paraffin lamps which cast a dimmer but more penetrating light.

Leonard Uren, a former Salvation Army worker, led the men in singing and praying. He had been in amateur vaudeville and entertained the men with his humor. They made

MORAL: NEVER PET
STRANGE BLACK CAT

Two girls of the flapper type and their boy friend were motoring near Goshen not long ago when one of the girls uttered a scream.

"There went a black cat across the road," she cried, "and now we'll have some kind of bad luck."

Whereupon the other girl announced a new angle to an old tradition. Somebody had told her that if the cat should be captured the jinx would be broken. Well, the cat was sitting by the roadside not far away. It seemed to be gentle and mild mannered. With one accord they climbed out of the car and started in the general direction of the kitty. They smiled at the kitty and spoke to it in dulcet tones. Then they made a rush to see which could catch it first.

(The curtain will be lowered a moment to denote the passing of a considerable period of time.)

After the boy friend had taken the girls to their homes, he went out and buried his clothes. The black cat was a skunk.—Indianapolis News.

MORAL: NEVER PET
STRANGE BLACK CAT

Two girls of the flapper type and their boy friend were motoring near Goshen not long ago when one of the girls uttered a scream.

"There went a black cat across the road," she cried, "and now we'll have some kind of bad luck."

Whereupon the other girl announced a new angle to an old tradition. Somebody had told her that if the cat should be captured the jinx would be broken. Well, the cat was sitting by the roadside not far away. It seemed to be gentle and mild mannered. With one accord they climbed out of the car and started in the general direction of the kitty. They smiled at the kitty and spoke to it in dulcet tones. Then they made a rush to see which could catch it first.

(The curtain will be lowered a moment to denote the passing of a considerable period of time.)

After the boy friend had taken the girls to their homes, he went out and buried his clothes. The black cat was a skunk. — Indianapolis News.

Black and Pink Liked as Color Combination

Few frocks give more general satisfaction than those made of black satin. As a rule they are simple enough for almost any occasion and at the same time are smart enough for the most important daytime social event.

It is quite noticeable that with few exceptions the new black frocks show touches of color. Occasionally the color is vivid, as in two extremely smart models which feature tones of lacquer red and green. As a general thing, however, the color introduced is more apt to be a delicate shade. Pastel tones frequently are combined with black and a pale tone of beige is often used successfully.

One of the smartest color combinations is seen in a dress of black crepe back satin combined with pale pink crepe de chine.

Western Fox Epic Shot in Heart of American Desert

In the American desert, John Ford director of the Western thriller, "3 Bad Men," with which Fox Film Corporation will startle those who love the West when it was wild, the greatest scenes of this mighty picture drama were taken. Greater than even "The Iron Horse," the story of "3 Bad Men," which is to be shown at the Lyceum on Saturday and Sunday, revolves about the mad rushes for homes and gold that marked the ten years following the closing of the Civil War. Especially thrilling is the race for re-opened lands in the Black Hills.

To depict perfectly the historic dash Mr. Ford journeyed to the heart of the desert with fifty-seven carloads of material and 15,000 people. There he had built a reproduction of the frontier town of Custer of 1877. Policed by deputy sheriffs typical of those who ruled with "six-guns" fifty years ago, Mr. Ford carried on the duties of motion picture director, Mayor, Marshal and general ruler of his motley army for months.

Chic New Models for Schoolgirls

Sport Frocks and Wraps, Specially Designed, Are Varied in Styles.

A few models have the gored or flaring skirt. One especially chic model is a sports dress designed by Vionnet for a tall girl of the fashionable boyish figure. It is made of chartreuse jersey, the skirt gored to flare perceptibly, the bodice joined with stitching at a low waistline. A novel detail is the deep-pointed yoke-shaped inset on the bodice, beginning under the arm and extending almost to the waist in front. A small, close, turnover collar with soft cravat tie and pockets and cuffs are worn with this frock, and hat of the vagabond shape has an unusually high crown, rippling brim and band of grosgrain ribbon, all in the same shade of chartreuse.

Several of the most prominent Paris couturiers, says a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, are designing with much success clothes for misses and young girls. Paquin has done some uncommonly nice things in coats, using the soft woollens in shades of brown and green and making much of side flares and plaitings. A lovely coat done for a ten-year-old girl is in sage green velours de laine with bands stitched on the front from the shoulder to the bottom of the garment, each overlapping a strip of narrow tucking. Madeline des Gayus, Callot Soeurs, Molyneux, Lanvin and Cheruit are among the French designers who, with others prominent in America, are establishing new and attractive styles for girls and young women, using a wide variety of materials and colors.

But it is the girl of the "awkward age" whose clothes present the real problem, and they must be selected

French, it is possible, with judgment and even a moderate investment, to fit the type of any very young lady whose individual preference in these matters early begins to develop. In these most of the new points in women's dress are reflected. Sleeves for the daytime are both long and short. For evening they are either very short or altogether ignored. The plain slightly bloused bodice and the bolero in different forms are equally good. Tiered skirts are arranged in either flat bands or flounces, and a few among the new skirts in models for misses are shirred all around the waist or in sections to form flaring panels.

A new detail is that of combining two materials, or the same material, in contrasting colors—joined in sections between the top and bottom of the dress. The blouse in nearly all of the late models is seldom trimmed, but many of the skirts are ruffled or overlaid with petals of the material or ribbon loops. Fringed taffeta ruching in rows on the skirt of a frock of georgette, with one row on the sleeves, is a happy treatment for an afternoon frock for a girl of fifteen. The apron front is shown on some of the new models, plaited flounces are good and most of the dresses of the supple fabrics are belted in some way.

Sheepskin Coats Late Vogue

Even a black sheep is not all black when his skin is turned into a suede coat. The newest examples of such garments arrived from England have as many colors as Joseph's coat. They are mottled in both bright and subdued effects, not the least of their attractiveness lies in the fact that these colors are guaranteed not to run. These coats are knee length, lined with satin and are wind and weather-proof.

Shawls That Have Only Three Sides Fringed

Metallic brocaded shawls having but three sides fringed are now being shown as fall items. In either gold or silver, two or more brilliant colors are combined. Instead of the colors being worked in the weave of the fabric, they are used in solid form as foliage or geometric figures. The fringe is made up of the same colorings, with metallic strands predominating. With these shawls are shown narrow scarfs; they are long, plainly finished throw varieties, without fringe or decoration of any kind, and are worn knotted simply at the side of the neck.

Earl Hudson's "Mismates" at the Lyceum

Another successful stage play has been transferred to the screen. This time it is Myron Fagan's play, "Mismates," which Earl Hudson has just produced for First National, with Doris Kenyon and Warner Baxter co-starring. "Mismates" is playing at the Lyceum tonight and Friday.

This play is admirably fitted for the screen. It is filled with stirring situations, brilliant spectacle, and has a story beautiful and dramatic. Charles Brabin directed. The story is built around the theme of mother love and a husband who deserts his wife and child, and the subsequent jailing of the wife. The working out of this situation is done in a masterly way.

THE GOVERNOR'S KEYNOTE SPEECH

Now that Governor Theodore Christianson's keynote speech is political history, its reaction may be noted by scanning various newspapers. One of the best resumes of his address and its effects is given in the Minneapolis Tribune editorial column, which states:

In the matter of governmental economy the opening address of Governor Christianson in his campaign for re-election is to Minnesota what a typical Coolidge message to congress is to the nation.

Both men are for the utmost public thrift consistent with efficient functioning by government. Both are against the assumption of new obligations that are not obviously necessary to the public welfare. Both are for liquidating public debts as rapidly as may be done without putting too heavy a burden on the present generation. Both are firm believers in the budget system and in orderly business processes as applied in the administration of public affairs. Both are for governmental organization that minimizes over-lapping effort, definitely locates responsibility, and procures in service the utmost in compensation for the dollar of the taxpayer.

Considerably more than half of the Fergus Falls speech is devoted to this subject of economy and saving of money. Governor Christianson pledges himself to carry on, if re-elected, as he has carried on the last 20 months in office. He reiterates the pledges made in his campaign two years ago. He did not hold forth the promise then of the working of miracles in tax reduction, nor does he do so now, but he lets it be understood that it will be no fault of his if the check on expenditures already accomplished is not continued as an enduring state policy. More than that, he cites the records to show that the business practices that have been put into Minnesota state government since he took office have been amply vindicated by what has been saved. He offers as an exhibit that in the first year of its functioning the budget board has effected a saving of $683,578.67 for the departments placed by the reorganization law under the finance board. The thrift accomplished represents 4.6 per cent of the appropriations for these departments.

If economy and efficiency are the compelling watchwords of government in Minnesota, what have the other gubernatorial candidates to offer that may give them precedence in the favor of the voters?

CLOSER PARKING REQUIRED

BRAINERD is losing business because cars do not park closer. By that we mean that many a prospective buyer of our merchants' wares becomes discouraged when such parking space is wasted and he finds himself unable to get his car anywhere near his trading place.

Brainerd people and Brainerd visitors seem lavish in their use of parking space. Examination of cars last night, for instance, finds much space wasted. If you want to see parking space economized and every possible car crowded in on a street, then visit Princeton on a Saturday night and see how farmers park their cars. All park at the same angle with just about a half foot space intervening. And talk about business! We counted solid rows of cars on both sides of the main street for a distance of four blocks or more.

Little Falls is another economizer of parking space. Yellow lines indicate the space and angle each car is to occupy. It's a matter of dollars and cents to Brainerd to park economically and to extend that parking privilege near one's favorite store.

An example of parking space appropriation is that of the east side of South Sixth street between Laurel and Maple streets. A popcorn stand is given space near the corner. Then comes a runway to a garage plus oil station clearance, followed by an unusually wide alley. Parking space is so restricted on that side of the street that comparatively few customers find a chance to tie up there to do any trading in Brainerd.

Saturday night business is worth something to this city. On a recent trip to the range country we passed 35 automobiles, loaded to the last seat, headed for Brainerd. Some wished to trade here, others attended our shows and other amusements.

The matter of adequate parking space near a theatre or other entertainment, or near the store where you trade is of supreme importance. It's a matter of business and we should see that every bit of parking space is utilized by our customers.

ENTERTAINING CITY'S GUESTS

THE Brainerd Chamber of Commerce started a plan of giving a hospitable reception to the farmers and their wives when they attended farm bureau meetings, sewing projects, etc., in Brainerd and the luncheons so provided gratis have caused an era of good feeling.

And other communities are sensing this too. Sauerkraut day is the occasion of a grand celebration at Springfield, Minn., so much so that another town nearby is striving to grab the honor from Springfield and also feeds its guests on barrels of sauerkraut and link after link of wieners.

And then comes Litchfield, which formally opened its buttermilk drying plant with a pancake bake and a dedication program at the opera house. The new plant cost $65,000 and was built through the cooperation of 16 creameries in Kandiyohi and Meeker counties.

THE N. P. gas jitney has been given a short trial and the steam train is again back "on the job." The change was made Monday after the gas-electric crew had trouble in starting it. The train was over three hours late on its schedule. At least until further notice the steam train will be kept in use, according to M. & I. officials at Bemidji.

FUNNY how news stories come and go. Other day we had a terrible report about Chinese bandits murdering and pillaging whole villages in a province in China. Not a follow up story has come since the tale of blood and pillage. The reader must draw his own conclusions as to what happened since then.

TOURIST traffic is growing larger. Five foreign cars in Minnesota in 1926 for every two that came in 1921, is the increase shown by the traffic census taken recently by the Minnesota highway department. In other words, tourist traffic increased 149 per cent in five years.

From the Daily Dispatch

Sept. 30, 1901

The Minnesota & International railway has closed a contract with the Backus Brothers Co. for the hauling of 4,000,000 feet of logs to Minneapolis this fall. This will keep the mills of the company running until the close of the season.

The work will commence at once and many of the logs will be hauled to the new mill at that place. The road has handled 120,000,000 feet of logs for the Minneapolis lumbermen this season.

Miss Lottie White left this afternoon for Minneapolis for a visit.

Mrs. C. M. Patek and Mrs. Henry I. Cohen entertained in a delightful manner the members of the Fort-nightly club on Saturday afternoon. The afternoon was very profitably and pleasantly spent. Light refreshments were served. The progressive prize was won by Mrs. A. J. Halsted, declare prize by Mrs. W. A. Fleming.

C. F. Kindred, who is as well known perhaps as any man in Crow Wing county, having lived here for years, arrived in the city last night from Philadelphia accompanied by his two daughters the Misses Jessie and Lola Kindred. They went out to Gull Lake this afternoon where they will enjoy an outing for a time.

Miss Daphne Dare of Elk River is in Brainerd to look over the field with a view of establishing a private kindergarten. Miss Dare is a graduate of the Minneapolis Kindergarten Institute and has had two years practical experience in the cities.

Yesterday was the last evening that Rev. Roderick J. Mooney will officiate at St. Paul's Episcopal church, his service as rector of the parish having terminated last evening.

Rev. Mooney has been in the city for over two years and since that time has been active in making many improvements about the church.

a show of working, too, to relieve their nervous energy.

Thus the hours passed and the men were careful to keep their watches wound to distinguish the days. Once in a while they rapped on the air pipe but did not know their signal had been heard.

Finally came voices out of the darkness, the voices of their comrades, who had been digging up from below. Questions flew back and forth, and after the safety of the entry had been assured the men made the perilous descent to the 21st level and came up in groups in the cage of "M" shaft.

Mine officials kept the news of the rescue secret for two hours, but finally it was noised around. Hysterical joyous scenes followed. One woman fainted.

All recognized that the courage of Trewartha was largely responsible for the safe return of the men.

"Good old Tom" was the tribute they paid in words today.

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 30.—Eager relatives and friends today stormed the Fairview hospital here where 43 men, who were removed from the Pabst iron ore mine after six days in its depths, are recovering from their trying experiences.

The rush was so great that the hospital could not hold all who wished entrance. The examination of the men also was hindered by the exuberance of those who wished to grasp the hands of the miners and congratulate them. Finally hospital authorities refused to admit any but relatives.

While the mothers, wives, children, sweethearts and sisters of the miners watched, the hospital physicians and mine physicians gave each of the 43 a thorough examination and it was announced that all were in "good condition."

"It is almost a miracle that every one of the men should have survived in such physical condition," one of the mine physicians told the United Press.

Thin soup and custards were the only foods permitted the men today when they awoke from the first night they had spent between clean sheets for almost a week. Within two or three days they will be allowed to partake of regular fare.

However, by that time, all will be in their own homes. Permission for all of the miners to leave the hospital by night was granted after the examination.

Entire Life Really

Series of Adventures

What is an adventure? I remember one night in a shift on the St. Francis river in Arkansas, I had paddled down all day long in a chill, wintry wind, which lay at dusk, and died into freezing cold as I stretched the canvas over the length of my shift. I fried two moccasins I'd shot that morning, ate them with flapjacks cooked over my yellow-dinner oil stove. I listened to a flock of wild geese, travelers, going over. I remembered wondering that night, in that lonely valley, if just sitting there was adventure. Two years before I had nearly gone under at the how famous Muscle Shoals. A few weeks before I went down to my shoulders in clay mud. After 20 years that quiet night with the ice crinkling round my feet looms as large in my memory as any other.

I rejoice in uncounted experiences. Picking and choosing among them for relative values, I find myself stumped. I can no more weigh the importance of memories than I can estimate the value of facts. At one time I think a narrow escape was beyond price; at another time a blip song has been equally thrilling; and again I have come upon a statement of fact in the repose of an evening's reading that exhilarated my thoughts for years, as Ruskin's judgment that the color of a rose, as the blossom opens, is the loveliest of all hues.

I do know this: When I have given months to reading about a subject, when I have gone forth to be witness to the region covered—as the Mississippi, or deserts, or green timber wilderness—and when I have returned again and again to the accumulation of facts, observations, ideas, discoveries, notions and all manner of information, I find that every phase, from library study to downright weariness under the park in loose snow, adds to the joy of living, the joy of retrospect. And when I have neglected books, or hardship of log, or the menaces of gloom and storm—by that much I missed something. My regrets are the things I didn't learn, the chances I didn't take—never the things that I obtained. All life is adventure—for adventure.—Raymond S. Spears, in Adventure Magazine.

Believe It or Not

"Nobody, of course, is expected to believe a fish story," said Knute Rimsen, Alexandrine avenue angler, "but here's one I offer for what it is worth. By the light of a lantern, a friend and I were fishing for bullheads in Seneca Lake, near Millford, the other night. The light will attract them within a foot or two of the surface. Well my friend saw one nosing around my bait. But the bullhead seemed reluctant to bite. So my friend leaned over the side of the boat, and before that fish could flip a fin, he grabbed him round the stomach with one hand and my line with the other. Then he pushed my hook right into the bullhead's mouth. I felt him gulp and gave the customary yank. That bullhead was the biggest I've landed in three years."

THE GOVERNOR'S KEYNOTE SPEECH

Now that Governor Theodore Christianson's keynote speech is political history, its reaction may be noted by scanning various newspapers. One of the best resumes of his address and its effects is given in the Minneapolis Tribune editorial column, which states:

In the matter of governmental economy the opening address of Governor Christianson in his campaign for re-election is to Minnesota what a typical Coolidge message to congress is to the nation.

Both men are for the utmost public thrift consistent with efficient functioning by government. Both are against the assumption of new obligations that are not obviously necessary to the public welfare. Both are for liquidating public debts as rapidly as may be done without putting too heavy a burden on the present generation. Both are firm believers in the budget system and in orderly business processes as applied in the administration of public affairs. Both are for governmental organization that minimizes overlapping effort, definitely locates responsibility, and procures in service the utmost in compensation for the dollar of the taxpayer.

Considerably more than half of the Fergus Falls speech is devoted to this subject of economy and saving of money. Governor Christianson pledges himself to carry on, if re-elected, as he has carried on the last 20 months in office. He reiterates the pledges made in his campaign two years ago. He did not hold forth the promise then of the working of miracles in tax reduction, nor does he do so now, but he lets it be understood that it will be no fault of his if the check on expenditures already accomplished is not continued as an enduring state policy. More than that, he cites the records to show that the business practices that have been put into Minnesota state government since he took office have been amply vindicated by what has been saved. He offers as an exhibit that in the first year of its functioning the budget board has effected a saving of $683,578.67 for the departments placed by the reorganization law under the finance board. The thrift accomplished represents 4.6 per cent of the appropriations for these departments.

If economy and efficiency are the compelling watchwords of government in Minnesota, what have the other gubernatorial candidates to offer that may give them precedence in the favor of the voters?

CLOSER PARKING REQUIRED

BRainerd is losing business because cars do not park closer. By that we mean that many a prospective buyer of our merchants' wares becomes discouraged when such parking space is wasted and he finds himself unable to get his car anywhere near his trading place.

Brainerd people and Brainerd visitors seem lavish in their use of parking space. Examination of cars last night, for instance, finds much space wasted. If you want to see parking space economized and every possible car crowded in on a street, then visit Princeton on a Saturday night and see how farmers park their cars. All park at the same angle with just about a half foot space intervening. And talk about business! We counted solid rows of cars on both sides of the main street for a distance of four blocks or more.

Little Falls is another economizer of parking space. Yellow lines indicate the space and angle each car is to occupy. It's a matter of dollars and cents to Brainerd to park economically and to extend that parking privilege near one's favorite store.

An example of parking space appropriation is that of the east side of South Sixth street between Laurel and Maple streets. A popcorn stand is given space near the corner. Then comes a runway to a garage plus oil station clearance, followed by an unusually wide alley. Parking space is so restricted on that side of the street that comparatively few customers find a chance to tie up there to do any trading in Brainerd.

Saturday night business is worth something to this city. On a recent trip to the range country we passed 35 automobiles, loaded to the last seat, headed for Brainerd. Some wished to trade here, others attended our shows and other amusements.

The matter of adequate parking space near a theatre or other entertainment, or near the store where you trade is of supreme importance. It's a matter of business and we should see that every bit of parking space is utilized by our customers.

CAST ANNOUNCED FOR LEGION PLAY

Gladys McKenna to Take Part of
"Betty" in Musical
Comedy Revue

REHEARSALS IN FULL SWING

"Types" Chosen in Cast for "Betty Behave," to be Staged
Oct. 6, 7

Rehearsals for the musical comedy revue "Betty Behave" are in full swing and everything is being pepped up for a whirlwind finish preparatory to the staging of the production, beginning with the matinee Wednesday, October 6, and continuing through Wednesday and Thursday nights. It has been very strenuous work making "Betty Behave" and at times this difficulty has been experienced with the entire cast and choruses but present indications are that during the performances all will act their best and assist in making "Betty Behave" in such manner as to acquire credit in the eyes of all.

Great care has been exercised in the selection of members of the cast, particular attention being given to "types" as well as to the securing of the best possible talent and the completed cast now stands as follows: Louis Hansen as John Case, Frank B. Johnson as Charlie Adams, John L. Morrison of Duluth as Lord Coots, Norma B. Parker as Mrs. Spiegelbank, Gladys McKenna as "Betty," Dorothy Harris as Gladys, Margaret Anderson as Peggy, Francis McCaffrey as Reginald Gingsass, George Sweet as Hiko and William Fitzharris as Ado.

The numerous groups and choruses embrace over 100 of the younger set who are swinging into their work like professionals and a highly successful presentation of the revue is assured.

NATURE DECREED NO MONOPOLY IN GEMS

Precious Stones Distributed All Over Earth.

Precious stones come from most out-of-the-way places, says a jeweler in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"The diamond comes from India, Brazil and South Africa. Although the diamond is nearly always water-clear in color, there are blue, green and yellow stones. As distinct from a white topaz, which is always quite water-clear in color, a yellow diamond has just a faint yellow tinge in it. The ancient Greeks knew the stone, and because it could not be cut and carved in those days like other stones on account of its hardness they gave it the name of Adamas.

"The ruby, which is next in hardness and was used so lavishly in the crown jewels and regalia of the king of Burma, now in the Indian section of the Victoria and Albert museum, South Kensington, comes from Burma, Ceylon, Mandalay, Afghanistan and Siam. There are also ruby mines in Australia.

"The spinel, which is distinct from the ruby proper, is a clear, bright red with a bluish tone. The choicest rubies are those the color of pigeon's blood, which come from Burma. The Indian ruby is lighter in color than those from other places. Weight for weight the perfect ruby is of much higher value than the diamond, but the stone is so full of flaws that it cannot be cut to the same advantage as the diamond.

"The sapphire, which is of such a beautiful blue, comes from Burma, Ceylon, Borneo and Australia. It is also found in Europe in the Rhine valley. The star sapphire, which is rather lighter in color, comes from Brazil, as does also the white sapphire.

"The emerald is the most valuable of the 'beryl' group, and comes from Colombia, in South America, India, New South Wales, Serbia and parts of Egypt. The earliest emeralds we know of were those that came from Cleopatra's mines in Egypt. The finest are those from Colombia where the wonderful emeralds, which so dazzled the Spaniards on their conquest of Mexico were afterward found to have come; they have more flash and are of a richer and deeper color than those from other countries.

"The aquamarine comes from the Ural mountains in Russia and also from Brazil; in color it ranges from a pale sea green to a blue tinge. The morganite is more commonly known as the pink 'beryl' and comes from Madagascar; at its finest it is of a pinky mauve orchid tint. It was given the name of 'morganite' on the occasion of the late J. P. Morgan giving to England the largest known specimen of it, which is now in the mineral gallery of the Natural History museum, South Kensington."

Tax on Ears in Tibet

In Tibet there is a tax on ears, and one-eyed men are feeling fortunate again. The full tax only is levied on men with two ears, and it was the levying of this tax a year or so ago that caused revolutionary outbreak. One-eyed men have to pay only 50 per cent of the assessed tax. Those without ears are completely exempt.

HEDDA HOYT SAYS--

By HEDDA HOYT

New York, Sept. 30. — (UP)—Very few women today wear a dress until it has paid for itself in utility. This is because fashions change so often and because women are too shiftless to bother with alterations. Despite the fact that most of the social activities fall during the winter months, one does not require an abundance of gowns to cope with the situation if one is clever. Coats cover up a multitude of fashion sins and if one is pressed on one's clothes allowance, one should let the coat carry part of the burden.

Perhaps you'll find a Spring dress of silk that can be dyed in one of the new shades or a last Winter's dress of velvet that's a bit shoddy about the skirt. Three scant tiers of harmonizing satin will bring the velvet skirt up to date. There may be a sleeveless dress for afternoon card parties which would be serviceable this year if fitted with matching sleeves of georgette. By altering these old frocks you can afford to pay a little more for a new one to be worn on more special occasions.

The street dress is far more important in Summer than it is in Winter when hidden by a coat and for this reason it is the one we should find among the left-overs from other seasons.

Behave," to be Staged
Oct. 6, 7

Rehearsals for the musical comedy revue "Betty Behave" are in full swing and everything is being pep-ped up for a whirlwind finish preparatory to the staging of the production, beginning with the matinee Wednesday, October 6, and continuing through Wednesday and Thursday nights. It has been very strenuous work making "Betty Behave" and at times this difficulty has been experienced with the entire cast and choruses but present indications are that during the performances all will act their best and assist in making "Betty Behave" in such manner as to acquire credit in the eyes of all.

Great care has been exercised in the selection of members of the cast, particular attention being given to "types" as well as to the securing of the best possible talent and the completed cast now stands as follows: Louis Hansen as John Cass, Frank B. Johnson as Charlie Adams,
John L. Morrison of Duluth as Lord
Coots, Norma B. Parker as Mrs.
Spiegelbank, Gladys McKenna as
"Betty," Dorothy Harris as Gladys,

The numerous groups and choruses embrace over 100 of the youngest set who are swinging into their work like professionals and a highly successful presentation of the revue is assured.

NATURE DECREED NO MONOPOLY IN GEMS

Precious Stones Distributed All Over Earth.

Precious stones come from most out-of-the-way places, says a jeweler in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"The diamond comes from India, Brazil and South Africa. Although the diamond is nearly always water-clear in color, there are blue, green and yellow stones. As distinct from a white topaz, which is always quite water-clear in color, a yellow diamond has just a faint yellow tinge in it.
The ancient Greeks knew the stone, and because it could not be cut and carved in those days like other stones on account of its hardness they gave it the name of Adamas.

"The ruby, which is next in hardness and was used so lavishly in the crown jewels and regalia of the king of Burmah, now in the Indian section of the Victoria and Albert museum, South Kensington, comes from Burma, Ceylon, Mandalay, Afghanistan and Siam.
There are also ruby mines in Australia.

"The spinel, which is distinct from the ruby proper, is a clear, bright red with a bluish tone. The choicest rubies are those the color of pigeon's blood, which come from Burma. The Indian ruby is lighter in color than those from other places. Weight for weight the perfect ruby is of much higher value than the diamond, but the stone is so full of flaws that it cannot be cut to the same advantage as the diamond.

"The sapphire, which is of such a beautiful blue, comes from Burma, Ceylon, Borneo and Australia. It is also found in Europe in the Rhine valley. The star sapphire, which is rather lighter in color, comes from Brazil, as does also the white sapphire.

"The emerald is the most valuable of the 'beryl' group, and comes from Colombia, in South America, India,
New South Wales, Serbia and parts of Egypt. The earliest emeralds we know of were those that came from Cleopatra's mines in Egypt. The finest are those from Colombia where the wonderful emeralds, which so dazzled the Spaniards on their conquest of Mexico, were afterward found to have come;

they have more flash and are of a richer and deeper color than those from other countries.

"The aquamarine comes from the Ural mountains in Russia and also from Brazil; in color it ranges from a pale sea green to a blue tinge. The morganite is more commonly known as the pink 'beryl' and comes from Madagascar; at its finest it is of a pinky mauve orchid tint. It was given the name of 'morganite' on the occasion of the late J. P. Morgan giving to England the largest known specimen of it, which is now in the mineral gallery of the Natural History museum, South Kensington."

Tax on Ears in Tibet

In Tibet there is a tax on ears, and one-eyed men are feeling fortunate again. The full tax only is levied on men with two ears, and it was the levying of this tax a year or so ago that caused revolutionary outbreak.
One-eyed men have to pay only 50 per cent of the assessed tax. Those without ears are completely exempt.

HEDDA HOYT SAYS---

By HEDDA HOYT

New York, Sept. 30. — (UP)—
Very few women today wear a dress until it has paid for itself in utility.
This is because fashions change so often and because women are too shiftless to bother with alterations.

Despite the fact that most of the social activities fall during the Winter months, one does not require an abundance of gowns to cope with the situation if one is clever. Coats cover up a multitude of fashion sins frock can be remodeled and worn under a smart coat without being a telltale of one's economy. The short-sleeved frock can be fitted with sleeves, the day dress with last year's tight sleeves can be remodeled

by using sleeves with deep armholes which taper toward the wrists, apron-fronts can be added, necklines altered. We are all aware of the facts which can be accomplished by remodeling although most of us fail to economize in this way.

a Spring dress of silk that can be last Winter's dress of velvet that's a bit shoddy about the skirt. Three scant tiers of harmonizing satin will bring the velvet skirt up to date.

There may be a sleeveless dress for afternoon card parties which would be serviceable this year if fitted with matching sleeves of georgette. By altering these old frocks you can afford to pay a little more for a new one to be worn on more special occasions.

The street dress is far more important in Summer than it is in Winter when hidden by a coat and for this reason it is the one we should find among the left-overs from other seasons.

IMPORTANCE OF THE OUTFIELD IS APPRECIATED

$100,000 MUFF OF FRED SNODGRASS IS A CASE IN POINT

EVEN DEADLIEST AND MOST ACCURATE FIELDERS NOT ALWAYS DEPENDABLE

The following is the third and last of a series of articles by Henry L. Farrell, United Press sports editor, comparing the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees. This article deals with the outfield.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, Sept. 30. — Since the $100,000 muff of Fred Snodgrass in a world's series, the importance of the outfield in a short series has been duly appreciated.

The muff made by Snodgrass shows not only the calamity that can result from a misjudged or muffed fly but it goes to prove that, like Peck's case in the series last year, even the deadliest fly chasers and most accurate fielders cannot be depended upon always.

There is not a great difference between the outfields of the National and American league champions excepting that the Yankees' trio is more experienced.

If Babe Ruth had a reputation as a world series star, the Yankees would have all the edge. But since he made his pitching record in a world's series with the Boston Red Sox, he has been very much of a bust.

Despite a lame ankle on which he is hobbling there are many who think that in this season of startling form reversals, the Babe will emerge as the big hero. The Babe always does the unexpected and this year he may justify all the fine things that have been said of his season's play.

The Yankee outfield has one distinct advantage in throwing. There is no arm in baseball to compare with Bob Meusel's for distance and speed and few can compare with the Babe's for accuracy.

By reason of his arm, his terrific hitting and his courage, Meusel has the edge over Blades and Hafe, who lack his class and his experience. There is one thing, however, that cannot be figured. Meusel does not always feel in the mood. If he gets pepped up he may be the star of the series. If he feels lazy he may be the boob.

In center, Combs, one of the fastest fielders in baseball and a speedy base runner, has only that on Douthit. Combs is notoriously weak as a thrower and he is not as dangerous at the bat as Douthit and he may be outplayed in the series.

Because the Babe is the Babe, right field has to be given to the Yankees. Billy Southworth played some wonderful baseball after John McGraw sent him from the Giants to the Cardinals but he has not the arm of the Babe or the hitting of the Babe and he cannot field any better.

There comes the question again, however, how will the Babe play in the series and how will his legs hold out?

Considering all angles, the Yankees seem to have a slight advantage because of the hitting and throwing of Bob Meusel and the Babe.

FOXLOW WINS JOCKEY CLUB STAKES AT NEWMARKET

Newmarket, England, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Sir Abe Bailey's Foxlow won the Jockey club stakes today and Sir J. Rutherford's Solaris, the favorite, which came in second, was disqualified for bumping and boring. The objection was filed in behalf of Foliation, S. Tattersall's entry, which finished third. Foliation thereby gained second place.

Another objection in behalf of Foliation was filed against Foxlow but this was overruled.

F. Curzon's Comedy King, which finished fourth, gained third place by Solaris's disqualification, and Reid Walker's Innuendo which finished fifth, gained fourth place.

Wall Street Betting on World Series
New York—Wall Street betting on the world series has persisted at 6 to 5 offerings that the Yankees will defeat the St. Louis Cardinals. Plenty of St. Louis money has appeared. Other bets of 14 to 1 that St. Louis does not win four straight and 3 to 1 the Yanks will win the first two games are being made.

Bobby Jones Honored in Scotland
St. Andrews, Scotland — Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Ga., has been elected a member of the famous Royal and Ancient golf club.

Dancing as Aid to Better Football
Boston — Boston college football players are advised by their Coach Fred Cavanaugh, that dancing is one of the best aides for gridiron excellence. It produces needed rhythm of legs and feet, he claimed. "Swimming is the worst of preparations," Cavanaugh declared. "It softens the muscles and reduces the wind."

CHARLIE HOFF TO SUE AMATEUR ATHLETIC UNION

SUIT FOR $100,000 DAMAGES IS FILED IN THE COURTS

SAID HE WAS FORCED TO TURN PROFESSIONAL BY ACTIONS OF A. A. U.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 30.—(UP)—Attorneys for Charlie Hoff of Norway, world champion pole vaulter, today plan to file suit against the Amateur Athletic Union for $100,000 damages. Hoff alleges the amateur organization influenced United States immigration officials to order him from the United States effective October 15, when his temporary immigration permit expires.

Hoff already has received a communication from Immigration Commissioner Ben M. Day in New York advising him that it will be necessary for him to leave.

Hoff's open break with the A. A. U. came when he turned professional by becoming a dancer on the vaudeville circuit. He claimed that while he came to the United States with the understanding that the amateur organization would finance him, he was forced to pay his own expenses and all engagements the A. A. U. scheduled for him. He was forced to turn to professionalism, he charged, to earn a living.

SMOLDERED IN PAST SEASON, WRECKED TEAM

TROUBLE STARTED WITH DIVISION OF WORLD SERIES MELON IN 1925

AFFAIR CAME TO HEAD IN BOSTON, WHERE SIGNALS CLASHED

Pittsburgh, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Internal dissension which smoldered through the past season and finally burst out, wrecking the championship baseball team, had its start during the pennant winning days of 1925, according to a copyrighted article appearing in the Pittsburgh Press today.

That sentiment against Fred Clarke, vice president and assistant manager of the Pittsburgh club, existed practically since his return here during the 1925 season is claimed in a statement appearing over the signatures of Max Carey, Carson Bigbee and Babe Adams, the three veterans, whose release brought the flareup before the eyes of the baseball world.

According to the three stars when time came for the split of the 1925 world's series melon, a vote of shares left Clarke with nothing. Max Carey, the captain of the champions, at that time, prevailed upon his team mates to cut Clarke in on the spoils and he received a check for $1,000.

This, according to the story, was returned by Clarke with a statement that it was "given with ill feeling," but he was later prevailed upon to accept it.

From this time on friction between Clarke and Manager Bill McKeechne and Clarke and members of the team increased, until Eddie Moore, according to the story, came out and demanded that "Clarke get off the beach." Moore is now playing ball for Boston.

The affair came to a head in Boston, where the Pirates were shut out three consecutive games by the Braves, due to a certain extent, according to the players, to signals given by Clarke in direct contrast to those ordered by McKeechne.

Following this series, a committee of players headed by Carey and consisting of Adams, Bigbee and Onslow, went to McKeechne and asked that a meeting be called of the players in an attempt to eliminate the friction. It says that McKeechne agreed with them but later called it off, saying "Secretary Sam Watters and I have a diplomatic manner of eliminating Clarke from the bench."

ALONG THE SIDELINES

Madison, Wis.—Coach George Little held his last big scrimmage before the opening game against Cornell college Saturday and prepared to pare down his squad to 35 or 40 men.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Coach Fielding Yost gave the plays out that Michigan intends to use this year and his squad walked through them in practice. They will get a tryout in Saturday's contest with the Oklahoma Aggies.

Iowa City, Ia.—On the offensive, the Iowa varsity ripped the freshmen team to ribbons, but when the yearlings took the ball the regulars were unable to stop line smashes or to knock down forward passes.

Evanston, Ill.—Northwestern engaged in its last scrimmage before the game with the South Dakota Coyotes last night and the ghost ball was used in the battle between varsity and freshmen.

Champaign, Ill.—Indication today were that Coach Bob Zuppke would hold out his regular backfield from the game against Coe College on Saturday to prevent damage to those players regarded as necessities to the team. The new rubber "raincoat" has been placed over the field to protect it for Saturday's game.

Chicago—Scrimmage was on today's bill for the Maroons and the freshmen were to be given plays of the type used by the Florida Alligators.

New York, Sept. 30.—"The most nervous ball club that ever entered a world series," one might say of the St. Louis Cardinals after watching them around the lobby of their hotel. Illustrative of the manner in which the Cardinals are passing the time is the behavior of Bill Sherdel, Flint Rhem and Keen, all pitchers.

First they sat in the lobby and talked, then they arose and walked around for a few minutes, next one of them bought a newspaper and they turned to the sporting page and looked at it together, then they left the hotel and walked a block or two together and returned to sit down and once more to talk. The conversation was mostly about the series. At last came the order to the ball park and relief was evident in each face.

The club is more or less a unit off the field, that is, there are no cliques such as have demoralized many teams. Manager Hornsby holds them together well and he has imposed but one fine, that of $50 on Arthur Reinhart, pitcher, all season.

There are two "Damon and Pythias" combinations on the club. Bill Hallahan and Ed Clough are usually together, dubbed "the silent twins," and it takes dynamite to keep Herman Bell and Roscoe Holm apart.

The team is without a "clown" such as Rabbit Maranville and Nick Altrock. Jim Bottomley, first baseman, comes nearest to filling that description. He is nearly always good humored and leads the lobby "wise crackers."

The Cardinals' "snappiest" dresser is admittedly Allan Sothoron, pitcher. The musician is "Specs" Toporcer, ukelele artist and infield substitute.

Ed Clough is considered the luckiest player on the club. Although on the roster all season, he pitched only two innings in league games. However, he did his full share in exhibition encounters and batting practice.

The Cardinals at their first practice in the Yankee Stadium found they liked the big Bronx park. "Great place to win a ball game," commented Bob O'Farrell, catcher. "Yeh, and with all those seats jammed a bad place to lose one," said the pessimistic Lester Bell, whose batting ability may be one of the most important factors in the series.

IMPORTANCE OF THE OUTFIELD IS APPRECIATED

$100,000 MUFF OF FRED SNODGRASS IS A CASE IN POINT

EVEN DEADLIEST AND MOST ACCURATE FIELDERS NOT ALWAYS DEPENDABLE

The following is the third and last of a series of articles by Henry L. Farrell, United Press sports editor, comparing the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees. This article deals with the outfield.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, Sept. 30. — Since the $100,000 muff of Fred Snodgrass in a world's series, the importance of the outfield in a short series has been duly appreciated.

The muff made by Snodgrass shows not only the calamity that can result from a misjudged or muffed fly but it goes to prove that, like Peck's case in the series last year, even the deadliest fly chasers and most accurate fielders cannot be depended upon always.

There is not a great difference between the outfields of the National and American league champions excepting that the Yankees' trio is more experienced.

If Babe Ruth had a reputation as a world series star, the Yankees would have all the edge. But since he made his pitching record in a world's series with the Boston Red Sox, he has been very much of a bust.

Despite a lame ankle on which he is hobbling there are many who think that in this season of startling form reversals, the Babe will emerge as the big hero. The Babe always does the unexpected and this year he may justify all the fine things that have been said of his season's play.

The Yankee outfield has one distinct advantage in throwing. There is no arm in baseball to compare with Bob Meusel's for distance and speed and few can compare with the Babe's for accuracy.

By reason of his arm, his terrific hitting and his courage, Meusel has the edge over Blades and Hafey, who lack his class and his experience. There is one thing, however, that cannot be figured. Meusel does not always feel in the mood. If he gets pepped up he may be the star of the series. If he feels lazy he may be the boob.

In center, Combs, one of the fastest fielders in baseball and a speedy base runner, has only that on Douthit. Combs is notoriously weak as a thrower and he is not as dangerous at the bat as Douthit and he may be outplayed in the series.

Because the Babe is the Babe, right field has to be given to the Yankees. Billy Southworth played some wonderful baseball after John McGraw sent him from the Giants to the Cardinals but he has not the arm of the Babe or the hitting of the Babe and he cannot field any better.

There comes the question again, however, how will the Babe play in the series and how will his legs hold out?

Considering all angles, the Yankees seem to have a slight advantage because of the hitting and throwing of Bob Meusel and the Babe.

FOXLAWS WINS JOCKEY CLUB STAKES AT NEWMARKET

Newmarket, England, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Sir Abe Bailey's Foxlaw won the Jockey club stakes today and Sir J. Rutherford's Solario, the favorite, which came in second, was disqualified for bumping and boring. The objection was filed in behalf of Foliation, S. Tattersall's entry, which finished third. Foliation thereby gained second place.

Another objection in behalf of Foliation was filed against Foxlaw but this was overruled.

F. Curzon's Comedy King, which finished fourth, gained third place by Solario's disqualification, and Reid Walker's Innuendo which finished fifth, gained fourth place.

Wall Street Betting on World Series
New York—Wall Street betting on the world series has persisted at 6 to 5 offerings that the Yankees will defeat the St. Louis Cardinals. Plenty of St. Louis money has appeared. Other bets of 14 to 1 that St. Louis does not win four straight and 3 to 1 the Yanks will win the first two games are being made.

CHARLIE HOFF TO SUE AMATEUR ATHLETIC UNION

SUIT FOR $100,000 DAMAGES IS FILED IN THE COURTS

SAID HE WAS FORCED TO TURN PROFESSIONAL BY ACTIONS OF A. A. U.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 30.—(UP)—Attorneys for Charlie Hoff of Norway, world champion pole vaulter, today plan to file suit against the Amateur Athletic Union for $100,000 damages. Hoff alleges the amateur organization influenced United States immigration officials to order him from the United States effective October 15, when his temporary immigration permit expires.

Hoff already has received a communication from Immigration Commissioner Ben M. Day in New York advising him that it will be necessary for him to leave.

Hoff's open break with the A. A. U. came when he turned professional by becoming a dancer on the vaudeville circuit. He claimed that while he came to the United States with the understanding that the amateur organization would finance him, he was forced to pay his own expenses and all engagements the A. A. U. scheduled for him. He was forced to turn to professionalism, he charged, to earn a living.

SMOLDERED IN PAST SEASON, WRECKED TEAM

TROUBLE STARTED WITH DIVISION OF WORLD SERIES MELON IN 1925

AFFAIR CAME TO HEAD IN BOSTON, WHERE SIGNALS CLASHED

Pittsburgh, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Internal dissension which smoldered through the past season and finally burst out, wrecking the championship baseball team, had its start during the pennant winning days of 1925, according to a copyrighted article appearing in the Pittsburgh Press today.

That sentiment against Fred Clarke, vice president and assistant manager of the Pittsburgh club, existed practically since his return here during the 1925 season is claimed in a statement appearing over the signatures of Max Carey, Carson Bigbee and Babe Adams, the three veterans, whose release brought the flareup before the eyes of the baseball world.

According to the three stars when time came for the split of the 1925 world's series melon, a vote of shares left Clarke with nothing. Max Carey, the captain of the champions, at that time, prevailed upon his team mates to cut Clarke in on the spoils and he received a check for $1,000.

This, according to the story, was returned by Clarke with a statement that it was "given with ill feeling," but he was later prevailed upon to accept it.

From this time on friction between Clarke and Manager Bill McKee and Clarke and members of the team increased, until Eddie Moore, according to the story, came out and demanded that "Clarke get off the bench." Moore is now playing ball for Boston.

The affair came to a head in Boston, where the Pirates were shut out three consecutive games by the Braves, due to a certain extent, according to the players, to signals given by Clarke in direct contrast to those ordered by McKee.

Following this series, a committee of players headed by Carey and consisting of Adams, Bigbee and Onslow, went to McKee and asked that a meeting be called of the players in an attempt to eliminate the friction. It says that McKee agreed with them but later called it off, saying "Secretary Sam Watters and I have a diplomatic manner of eliminating Clarke from the bench."

ALONG THE SIDELINES

Madison, Wis.—Coach George Little held his last big scrimmage before the opening game against Cornell college Saturday and prepared to pare down his squad to 35 or 40 men.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Coach Fielding Yost gave the plays out that Michigan intends to use this year and his squad walked through them in practice. They will get a tryout in Saturday's contest with the Oklahoma Aggies.

Iowa City, Ia.—On the offensive, the Iowa varsity ripped the freshmen team to ribbons, but when the yearlings took the ball the regulars were unable to stop line smashes or to knock down forward passes.

Evanston, Ill.—Northwestern engaged in its last scrimmage before the game with the South Dakota Coyotes last night and the ghost ball was used in the battle between varsity and freshmen.

Champaign, Ill.—Indication today were that Coach Bob Zuppke would hold out his regular backfield from the game against Coe College on Saturday to prevent damage to those players regarded as necessities to the team. The new rubber "raincoat" has been placed over the field to protect it for Saturday's game.

Chicago—Scrimmage was on today's bill for the Maroons and the freshmen were to be given plays of the type used by the Florida Alligators.

"MOST NERVOUS BALL CLUB EVER IN WORLD SERIES"

The boat sank to the bottom and rested on a mud bank, leaving Mr. Britton to effect his own escape, until the two men hearing his cries, rowed out and rescued him from his perilous position.

Alaska's Hospital Ship

Needed medical attention for Alaskan natives living in isolated communities is offered this summer by a well-equipped hospital ship. Medical service heretofore has been available at only a few posts, but the hospital ship, which is equipped for emergency treatment and in charge of a competent physician, will carry on its mission of healing among scattered groups of natives living in remote places along the Yukon and its tributaries from the Canadian border to St. Michael during the summer months in which navigation is possible. Permanence of the service is assured by a recent congressional appropriation, and it will become an important feature of work of the Alaska division of the bureau of education, interior department.

Love "Poaching" Punished

In the mountain districts of Italian South Tyrol a medieval taboo still prevails which forbids a young man of one village to flirt with a girl of another. The offender usually meets with a severe beating some night on a country road, and on several occasions has paid for his temerity with his life, says the Turin Stampa.

Recently a young peasant, Franz Belwercher, of the town of Gais, was found to be paying court to a girl of the village of Ottone. He awoke one night on a state of unconsciousness one night on a lonely road, bleeding from severe wounds. He told the police, who refused to respect the ancient tradition of the country and arrested the assailants.

October 29 is Date Set for Reunion of Members of Unity Lodge

INVITATION TO ALL MEMBERS Members Are Residing in Many Different Parts of the Continent

Friday evening, October 29, has been set aside for a reunion of the members of Unity lodge of Brainerd. The committee in charge of arrangements have written to every member urging him to make every effort to attend this big meeting. All the Grand Lodge officers have been invited and some of them have already accepted the invitation and signified their intention of coming.

Unity lodge has a membership of 250 but the average attendance would not indicate that the number was so large. Nearly every state in the union and some of the provinces of Canada have members of this old lodge and the committee is urging the members who will be unable to attend to write a letter to show that they are still interested in Unity.

A short program is being arranged and the committee in charge of refreshments, promise a surprise but the chief source of entertainment will be the reminiscences of the old timers and the history of Odd Fellowship in Brainerd, a significant part of the life of the city and community.

Theodore Miller, John K. Hill and Nels A. Jenson are the members of the committee having the arrangements in charge.

Mr. Cobb pointed out that Brainerd would be a favored place for the holdings of athletic events for the district if grounds could be provided, on account of its ideal location. The speaker also urged encouragement of Y. M. C. A. work in the city.

THRILLING RESCUE

Herbert Britton, Duck Hunter Falls Into Lake and Saved by Hunters

A rather thrilling rescue was effected yesterday morning when Fremont Mahle and J. W. Fry who were on a hunting trip near Red Sand Lake, heard cries of distress and calls for help. Herbert Britton, who runs a barber shop on Oak street was also out hunting and in his zealous quest for ducks, stood up in his boat in order to get a better aim and succeeded in upsetting the boat. The boat sank to the bottom and rested on a mud bank, leaving Mr. Britton to effect his own escape, until the two men hearing his cries, rowed out and rescued him from his perilous position.

Alaska's Hospital Ship

Needed medical attention for Alaskan natives living in isolated communities is offered this summer by a well-equipped hospital ship. Medical service heretofore has been available at only a few posts, but the hospital ship, which is equipped for emergency treatment and in charge of a competent physician, will carry on its mission of healing among scattered groups of natives living in remote places along the Yukon and its tributaries from the Canadian border to St. Michael during the summer months in which navigation is possible. Permanence of the service is assured by a recent congressional appropriation, and it will become an important feature of work of the Alaska division of the bureau of education, interior department.

Love "Poaching" Punished

In the mountain districts of Italian South Tyrol a medieval taboo still prevails which forbids a young man of one village to flirt with a girl of another. The offender usually meets with a severe beating some night on a country road, and on several occasions has paid for his temerity with his life, says the Turin Stampa.

Recently a young peasant, Franz Belwercher, of the town of Gais, was found to be paying court to a girl of the village of Ottone. He awoke from a state of unconsciousness one night on a lonely road, bleeding from severe wounds. He told the police, who refused to respect the ancient tradition of the country and arrested the assailants.

TO BUILD TOURIST SHACKS

Leon J. Clouse to Accommodate Tourists When They Pass Through Ft. Ripley

Anticipating a big influx of tourists to the district over the new pavement on Highway No. 27 in 1927, Leon J. Clouse is planning the construction of an oil station, one and one half miles north of Fort Ripley, and also the erection of a number of shacks for the accommodation of the tourists.

The camp will be similar to those used extensively in the west with the small cabins equipped with beds, bedding, and stoves. All that the tourist needs to furnish for his comfort is the cooking utensils. A sandwich shop will also be run by Mr. Clouse in connection with the camp for the convenience of motorists who do not care to do their own cooking.

Tracked by the Police

Novel by William B. Courtney

Copyright, 1926, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"TRACKED BY THE POLICE," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Among the things that have sustained Jimmy Ford through the horrors of war in France are letters from his sweetheart, Ruth Allen. One of these letters upsets him, because it tells of the attention Dan Murtagh, a politician, pays her in Jimmy's absence. In his heartbreak he volunteers for a dangerous raid. A German war dog gives her life to save his. Jimmy, in gratitude, adopts her puppy, and smuggles it home after the war. Jimmy's father, a police lieutenant, is mysteriously murdered. Jimmy joins the force to avenge him, and has an able ally in Rin-Tin-Tin, now full grown.

Out-out-back and front, to a luxurious, satisfying stretch of every little cord and nerve and tendon in his great body; tingling now, grunting with the joy of strong physical life. Rinty drew himself together again, and the same motion that carried his legs ere he under him sent him forward on a wide-awake, jocular trot into Jimmy Ford's bedroom.

At one minute and thirty seconds past six on that soft September morning the arbitrary jerking of the bedclothes from his body and the nipping of friendly fangs at his bare feet summoned Jimmy Ford from the land of dreams to a realer land just as interesting and romantic to him, in the first flush of manhood and love, as could be any figment of the night's sweet fancy. A land of work, and people, and a dog that he loved.

The light touch of two swift passing years had brought to Jimmy many fortunate things. He had gone away to the War a boy and come home from it a man full molded and tempered in mind and body, albeit a trifle immature emotionally. The shock of his father's murder, but a short week later, had been a climax which forged his emotions into a stable whole with his mental and physical qualities, so that he had stood forth sad but clear-eyed on the dark and desolate day after his father had been laid away in the imperturbable dust over which Father Clancy muttered a few prayers and sprinkled a few drops of salted water. Gone then the careless flip of youth from his eyes; the arm that he had slipped around his little mother's quivering shoulders even as it comforted her took the responsibility for holding the load of life off those frail shoulders.

The look that the man Jimmy passed to Ruth's dear, suffering eyes above his mother's head had been pregnant with a worshipping insight and understanding that brooked no longer the jealousies and selfish sulking of the boy Jimmy.

In that hour Jimmy's love had grown up to and matched the calm, sweet certitude of Ruth's devotion; affection and advanced comprehension; in her heart there was no room for another, in his mind there was no more space for youthful jealousy. Then began the sure and steady fostering of love, and the preparation for the sanctification of love some future day before that selfsame Father Clancy whose cloth gave him the holy power to bless and speed the wedding of two lives, as it did the beginning and the close of individual lives.

Patience love. The patient love of the poor. In all the world there is nothing nobler than the long-denying steadfastness of true love in those to whom the stress and obstacles of economic stringency deny a spontaneous launching of the marital adventure. Well enough for the scions and pampered daughters of the rich and well-to-do; with them, to love or covet is to marry—without hindrance or delay. Not so the fortune of the poor or moderately circumstanced. For them, while the candle is reverently tended, the tallow must be stocked by the slow and painful accumulation of "enough to get married on." Common phrase, that, in the shadowed strata of humanity? Common in Chelsea. Common for Jimmy and Ruth. Many's the time they mouthed it longingly, the while

In hallowed dusks they sat love-drunk on pier stringpieces in quiet nooks of the North river waterfront, holding hands, thrilling in untold measures at the bulge of thigh against thigh, kissing. Unexploded passion! Matches flaming under powder kegs. Plain, old-fashioned courting. Petting parties not for such unsophisticated ones as these.

Gravely Jimmy had gone to work. It was not so much that he had to support his mother. The pension from the Lieutenant's Fund of the Police Department assured her comfort for the rest of her days. Happiness she would never know again—now that her Jim was gone. For further material aid, there was the spare bedroom. If some nice bachelor cop would appreciate a clean room in a quiet flat at a reasonable charge. Someone like Officer Flaherty, for instance—fat, and jolly, and a little dumb, and clumsy-fingered. Indeed, Flaherty would! And so, in due course, he was installed.

No, the fact of the matter was that Mrs. Ford, knowing how things stood with Jimmy and Ruth, and having a soft memory of her own flushed young days with Jim, would accept no more from Jimmy than his board.

Friends he had by the score. Lieutenant Ford's boy! Him that was shot down making things safe for us around here! Within the week Jimmy's rifle and grenade clung to his fingers were cramping over bank statements, and his application for "the force" was on file with the commission, bearing three endorsements from as many captains and inspectors who had been his father's friends. Jim Ford's boy!

Not many weeks later he had left the staid ledgers for two days and presented himself for the test of his manhood, the gauge of his mind, that would add an unimpeachable board in determining whether or not there was merit enough in him to make wise the appointment to the force of this young man about whom so many high police officials had waxed and written sentimentally. Small need of friendly boosting in his case! Rare in the history of the department, here was a man who had passed with a perfect score—mental and physical!

Ruth had had something to do with that, indirectly, of course. The fragrant odor of her hair in his nostrils as he bent over examination papers, the strong phantom pressure of her hand when he strained at his physical drills. His father, too—a beckoning, smiling, encouraging, idealized phantom. Little wonder it was as it was with Jimmy Ford's test.

Then he was in the rookie's school. Then a probationer, proud and with the lusty swing of tradition and family heritage in his carriage. Already a suggestion of paternalism in the manner in which he stroked dirty Dago kids on their unwashed heads.

That was James Ford, Sr.—the genial and amiable, but hard-fisted pride of the toughest neighborhoods in his plain cop days—living again in his son. Father to son—a succession of gild pride that persists solely, almost without exception, in the humbler walks of human endeavor. One seldom hears of a railroad president being succeeded by his son. But a cop—the bright gold lieutenant's bars of his father's coat wore a burnished glow, Jimmy went into the staid parlor in his pajamas every morning immediately after Rinty had routed him from the sheets and formally saluted the purple and black draped crayon enlargement of his father that hung over the bannetted synthetic fireplace.

"Why," Jimmy always said guiltily to Rinty, who gravely accompanied him each morning, "he'd been an inspector, maybe even a deputy commissioner, if Murtagh wouldn't have poisoned the political clans against him."

And Rinty always looked steadfastly at the crayon likeness and ruminated over the statement of thwarted eminence, not that he was at all interested in the photograph as a picture—indeed, it made no sense to Rinty at all, because, while it looked like a man, it did not smell like a man, but reeked rather of all kinds of disconcerting greases and powders—but merely because it was undoubtedly the object of his beloved master's especial concern. Therefore, quite aside from his personal lack of interest in sentimental art, Rinty stood ready to bite the hand off any strange man, woman or child who might profanely touch the mysterious and abstract treasure.

Following this, while Jimmy proceeded to avail himself of the new-fangled shower that he had had a Twenty-third street Irish plumber attach to the flat's old fashioned bathtub at a cost of $11.85, Rinty went about other chores. First he scoured Officer Flaherty into wide awakefulness by snarling and barking in his face. It was not a well loved or intimately affectionate task like the rousing of Jimmy! A one man dog—was Rinty!

Lucky Man Gets All

A tonine agreement is an arrangement by which a group of persons share certain benefits or moneys on such terms that in the event of the death or default of one or more members these shares are divided among the remaining members, until one person has the whole amount or advantage. In most modern insurance tonines the whole goes to those remaining in the group on the expiration of the tonine period.

The teacher was explaining the difference in meaning of certain words, and asked for sentences containing the words "thoughts" and "revelry." Little Willie volunteered. "I had several thoughts last night," he said. "That's correct," remarked the teacher encouragingly. "Now give me a sentence with 'revelry' in it." The reveler blew his whistle and stopped the game," was the answer.

Merion Cricket Club, South Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 30.—(UP)—The women's national golf championship entered its fourth day today minus three more strong contenders for the title.

Mrs. G. Henry Stetson and Miss Edith Cummings.

Guatemala has 2,000,000 people and Salvador, with an area of only 7,225 square miles, 1,040,000, or 144 persons to the square mile. This is the densest population in the western hemisphere. CALL MONEY TIGHTENS

New York, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Call money tightened to 6 per cent today after renewing at 5 1/2 per cent but professional operators who had been counting upon this development to force lower prices were disappointed when no such sequel occurred. Instead the main body of stocks put forth the best action exhibited by far this week.

Aggressive selling was undertaken by the bear crowd subsequent to the establishment of the six per cent call rate but the action of the general list on this drive suggested that this was bad news for which the market was waiting to be out of the way.

Buying of an impressive character came into the industrials and high grade rails and many sharp advances featured the afternoon trading. Union Pacific was the star performer in the rail group while General Motors and United States Steel led the industrials.

The market closed irregular.

Bird Reserve Abandoned

Abandonment of a native bird reserve in the state of Arkansas was authorized in an executive order issued on the recommendation of the secretary of agriculture and the secretary of the interior.

The reserve comprises 14 acres located in Mississippi county. When originally established in 1913, the area was a resort and breeding ground for native birds. Since then, owing to drainage operations in this section of Arkansas, the tract has become dry and contains no water.

With the disappearance of the water the native birds departed and the reserve lost its value for the purpose for which it was created. The land included in the area will be returned as a part of the public domain of the United States.

Prosperity in Hawaii

To prevent them from becoming commercialized, all the famous beaches in Hawaii are to be acquired by the government, including that of Waikiki, the subject of modern song all over the world. The territorial government will finance the construction of imposing resorts which it is hoped will attract tourists from all parts of the world. It has already secured possession of one tract for $900,000 which was one-third of its appraised value. Hawaii is reported to be enjoying great prosperity. About one out of three of its natives have bank accounts. The government is building new roads and making extensive harbor improvements.

Tracked by the Police

Novel by William B. Courtney

Copyright, 1926, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"TRACKED BY THE POLICE," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel.

Among the things that have sustained Jimmy Ford through the horrors of war in France are letters from his sweetheart, Ruth Allen. One of these letters upsets him, because it tells of the attention Dan Murtagh, a politician, pays her in Jimmy's absence. In his heartbreak he volunteers for a dangerous raid. A German war dog gives her life to save his. Jimmy, in gratitude, adopts her puppy, and smuggles it home after the war. Jimmy's father, a police lieutenant, is mysteriously murdered. Jimmy joins the force to avenge him, and has an able ally in Rin-Tin-Tin, now full grown.

Out—back and front, to a luxurious, satisfying stretch of every little cord and nerve and tendon in his great body; tingling now, grunting with the joy of strong physical life. Rinty drew himself together again, and the same motion that carried his hind legs erect under him sent him forward on a wide-awake, joyous trot into Jimmy Ford's bedroom.

At one minute and thirty seconds past six on that soft September morning the arbitrary jerking of the bedclothes from his body and the nipping of friendly fangs at his bare feet summoned Jimmy Ford from the land of dreams to a reader land just as interesting and romantic to him, in the first flush of manhood and love, as could be any fragment of the night's sweet fancy. A land of work, and people, and a dog that he loved.

The light touch of two swift passing years had brought to Jimmy many fortunate things. He had gone away to the War a boy and come home from it a man full of life and tempered in mind and body, albeit a trifle immature emotionally. The shock of his father's murder, but a short week later, had been a climax which forged his emotions into a stable whole with his mental and physical qualities, so that he had stood forth sad but clear-eyed on the dark and desolate day after his father had been laid away in the imperturbable dust over which Father Clancy muttered a few prayers and sprinkled a few drops of sainted water. Gone then the careless flip of youth from his eyes; the arm that he had slipped around his little mother's quivering shoulders even as it comforted her took the responsibility for holding the load of life off those frail shoulders.

The look that the man Jimmy passed to Ruth's dear, suffering eyes above his mother's head had been pregnant with a worshipping insight and understanding that brooked no longer the jealousies and selfish sulking of the boy Jimmy.

In that hour Jimmy's love had grown up to and matched the calm, sweet certitude of Ruth's sturdy affection and advanced comprehension; in her heart there was no room for another, in his mind there was no more space for youthful jealousy. Then began the sure and steady fostering of love, and the preparation for the sanctification of love some future day before that selfsame Father Clancy whose cold gave him the holy power to bless and speed the wedding of two lives, as it did the beginning and the close of individual lives.

Patience love. The patient love of the poor. In all the world there is nothing nobler than the long-drawn steadfastness of true love in those to whom the stress and obstacles of economic stringency deny a spontaneous launching of the marital adventure. Well enough for the scions and pampered daughters of the rich and well-to-do; with them, to love or covet is to marry—without hindrance or delay. Not so the fortune of the poor or moderately circumstanced. For them, while the candle is reverently tended, the tallow must be stocked by the slow and painful accumulation of "enough to get married on."

Common phrase, that, in the shadowed straits of humanity! Common in Chelsea. Common for Jimmy and Ruth. Mary's the time they mouthed it longingly, the while

Lucky Man Gets All

A tonnage agreement is an arrangement by which a group of persons share certain benefits or money on such terms that in the event of the death or default of one or more members these shares are divided among the remaining members, until one person has the whole amount or advantage. In most modern insurance tonnage the whole goes to those remaining in the group on the expiration of the tonnage period.

Where Willie Fell

The teacher was explaining the difference in meaning of certain words, and asked for sentences containing the words "thoughts" and "reverts." Little Willie volunteered. "I had several thoughts last night," he said. "That's correct," remarked the teacher encouragingly. "Now give me a sentence with 'reverts' in it!" "The reverie blew his whistle and stopped the game," was the answer.

WOMEN'S GOLF NATIONAL PLAY DETHRONES STARS

MISS HELEN PAYSON, MAINE CHAMPION, TASTES

DEFEAT

MISS BERNICE WALL, WISCONSIN STATE CHAMPION, ALSO DEFEATED

Merion Cricket Club, South Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 30.—(UP)—The women's national golf championship entered its fourth day today minus three more strong contenders for the title.

On the soggy course of the Merion Cricket club, the second day of match play brought the defeat of Miss Helen Payson, Maine champion; of Miss Bernice Wall, the Wisconsin state champion, and Mrs. J. S. Cassariel, of Chicago, who defeated Mrs. Dorothy Hurd the day before.

The title matches today had simmered down to four. As a result the prospects were for the real battle on the links here to take place tomorrow when Miss Glenna Collett, defending champion, will meet Miss Edith Cummings, provided both win today's matches.

Today's pairings: Miss Glenna Collett and Miss Virginia Wilson.

Mrs. G. Henry Stetson and Miss Edith Cummings.

Mrs. Wright D. Goss, Jr., and Mrs. Norman Toerge.

Mrs. J. L. Anderson and Mrs. Courtland Smith.

Merion Cricket Club, South Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 30.—Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I., national women's golf champion, was eliminated today in the third round of match play for the 1926 championship by Miss Virginia Wilson of Chicago.

Miss Wilson won two up and one to play, after they had rounded the turn on even terms.

Mrs. Henry Stetson of Philadelphia amazed even her ardent followers when she defeated Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago, former national titleholder, 6 and 5.

Miss Wilson, conqueror of Miss Collett, is a school girl of Chicago. To defeat Miss Cummings, Mrs. Stetson went out in par 42, where she was 3 up, and came back in 46.

Miss Cummings won but one hole, the seventh with a birdie four. The others she lost or halved.

Mrs. Wright Goss, Jr., beat Mrs. Norman Toerge, Glen Cove, L. I., 2 up.

Mrs. Cortland Smith, Glen Ridge, N. J., beat Mrs. J. La Roque Anderson, Cherry Valley club, Garden City, L. I., 3 and 1.

Little Soil Not Tilled

In Guatemala and Salvador, the two most populous countries in Central America, the population is so dense that there is very little waste land. Guatemala has 2,000,000 people and Salvador, with an area of only 7,225 square miles, 1,040,000, or 144 persons to the square mile. This is the densest population in the western hemisphere. These countries are rich in sugar, coffee, minerals, rice, hemp, cotton and bananas.

Ether Waves, Maybe

Bobby had spent nearly an hour in carefully constructing a house of sand at the Jamestown park playground and had nearly completed it when a little ruffian who had no respect for artistic architecture kicked over the structure. "Say, but," muttered Bobby, "if you do that again you're going to hear from me, and it won't be by telephone either."—Indianapolis News.

CALL MONEY TIGHTENS

New York, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Call money tightened to 6 per cent today after renewing at 5½ per cent but professional operators who had been counting upon this development to force lower prices were disappointed when no such sequel occurred. Instead the main body of stocks put forth the best action exhibited by far this week.

Aggressive selling was undertaken by the bear crowd subsequent to the establishment of the six per cent call rate but the action of the general list on this drive suggested that this was bad news for which the market was waiting to be out of the way.

Buying of an impressive character came into the industrials and high grade rails and many sharp advances featured the afternoon trading. Union Pacific was the star performer in the rail group while General Motors and United States Steel led the industrials.

The market closed irregular.
